1. The abstract of the disclosure is objected to because superfluous language is used in this paragraph (i.e., "[t]he present invention provides"). Correction is required. See MPEP § 608.01(b).

2. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 1-37 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

As per method claims 1-36, the claims recite a method for performing a mathematical function. The claimed invention comprises a plurality of mental steps whereby the claimed mental steps are non-statutory subject matter. Specifically, some claimed method steps, e.g., see claim 1, can be practiced mentally in conjunction with pen and paper. However, in order for such a claimed computer-related process to be statutory, the method claims must include either a step that results: (1) in a physical transformation outside the computer, (2) in a limitation to a practical application, or (3) performed specific machine/element(s).

As per apparatus claim 37, the claim recites means plus functions to perform data. The data is merely inputted to the system and then outputted. Moreover, the instant system does not provide any specific elements to perform the function(s). The apparatus claim does not recite a specific machine. Instead, it is recited that a non-specific machine accomplishes the manipulation of data, the data having no pre-or post-computer use.

Accordingly, claims 1-37 are clearly directed to a non-statutory process.

3. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Cited references are art of interest.
